C 155 Astronomical Clock . . . . . Presented by the Art Association

C 156 Memorial to The Union League Regiments in the War of the Rebellion — Sculptor H. K. Bush-Brown

The subject which the design and figures of the tablet are intended to represent is the equipment and departure of troops in defence of the Union.

The central figure is the winged Goddess, The Union, bringing munitions of war to the soldier to defend her.

In the centre is a drummer boy, beating the call to arms, and on the left is a soldier marching forward bearing the flag.

In the rear are a number of figures indicating the massing of the troops.

Behind the drummer boy, is the kneeling figure of a woman holding up her infant son, who, watching the troops, sees the angel of the Union and stretches his hands to receive the gun and accoutrements which the angel is presenting to the soldier behind him.

These figures express the dedication of the child to the cause of Liberty, and the absorbing interest felt in the events then taking place in the Nation's history.

As architectural accessories to the arch above the relief, are introduced the Infant Hercules bearing a tablet (1861) and opposite the Infant Mars bearing the tablet (1865).

In the central tablet below, is the following inscription :

"In commemoration of the regiments recruited and the patriotic services rendered during the War of the Rebellion, by The Union League of Philadelphia."

"Presented July 4, 1866, to Major General George G. Meade by The Union League of Philadelphia, as a token of the gratitude of his countrymen."

On the reverse side are figures representing Liberty presenting to General Meade the olive wreath in return for his sword. Also the following inscription:

"The Victor at Gettysburg. The Deliverer of our State, the faithful soldier of our Country. July, 1863."

Upon General Meade's death, his family requested The Union League to retain the medal for them.
